

Abstract

An osteogenic implant with improved osteointegration properties. In one embodiment said implant consists of titanium or a titanium base alloy and has an at least partially roughed-up surface. Said surface, in the hydroxylated state, is at least partially coated with a polypeptide, namely a transforming growth factor (TGF) or a systemic hormone, or with a mixture of such compounds.